

DOC REDMAN (-7)

Q. You were a prolific winner as a junior and an amateur. When was the most prolific time of your golfing career?

DOC REDMAN: Man, I don't know. I feel like I never -- you know, I won a lot, but not too much because I was always trying to kind of play up in junior golf. Once I committed to Clemson, I started playing the best amateur events I could play, whether that was in the state or across the country, just because I wanted to play against good college players. We played a great schedule at Clemson and I was playing the top amateur events. So playing guys like Scottie and Collin, and I was nowhere near as good as them back in the day. So I think I was all just building on good finishes, kind of like I have here, and wins when I could.

Q. Scheffler, is that the Scottie?

DOC REDMAN: Yeah, Scheffler. Those guys, back when I was a freshman and they were juniors or seniors, however old they are, they were cream of the crop, and still are obviously. But I'm still getting a lot better and I think I still am, so I don't think I'm on necessarily the same timeline as those guys.

Q. And you're only -- how old are you now?

DOC REDMAN: Twenty-two. Yeah, it's crazy.

Q. That's pretty young. Do you feel young?

DOC REDMAN: You know, I guess in a lot of ways, yeah, and that's how I look at it. There's guys who play well in their mid 30s out here, so there's no rush for me to win or to kind of mature as a player. And I guess it helps, too, I feel kind of old because I've played a lot of events out here, you know, for a 22-year-old who this is their first year. So I've got a lot of experience and I feel very comfortable around the guys and around the courses, just navigating my way around the PGA TOUR.

Q. Could you talk a little bit about the positive memories coming back here and how different it was preparing for this week, that you knew you were in the field compared to last year?

DOC REDMAN: Yeah, I think it was a lot different. I was talking to some of my friends about it, I've come off two good finishes and a really good finish last year at this event, which has never really happened to me. So I've never had this kind of expectation externally or even internally if I let it, so just trying to make it the same as every other week. I think I feel very comfortable because I've played well here and been here, so it just comes down to playing golf and doing the best I can.
